The vestibule, staircase, and ante-chamber were adorned with huntour Savionr and his Aposhles, designed for a Rocase, and ante-chamber were alorned with hunting trophies, gaus, rifles, hunting poignards, and other similar objects. The orehestra played hunting songs for the guests to dance by, and the waltzes (for there is no song by which one can waltz) were interrupted by various horn accompaniments familiar to sportsmen. Concealed singers accompanied the orchestra by barking, baying, snapping, and moaning in the most approved canine style, while whippers-in cracked their whips, and the game-keepers exploded percussion caps.

At a quarter of twelve the limitsmen, whippersin, and gaure-keepers on the staircase blew the fully-ho, and at twelve o'clock they blew the quarry. When the quarry was sounded, the ball-room was invaded by a great quantity of game of all sorts, which appeared to allack the Grand Hunisman. These game costimuse were excellently gotten up. The birds—there were partridges, pheasants, ployers, heath-cocks—were all feathered; the wolves, foxes, hares, stags, deer, were all in the skins of the beasts, with a mask. tridges, pheasants, plovers, heath-cocks—were all feathered; the wolves, foxes, larges, stags, deer, were all in the skins of the beasts, with a mask and false head of pasteloand, faithfully initiating the appearance of these animals. United the Metternich, the Austrian Ambasador (!), was the heath-cock; he was dressed and crowed to perfection. It seems this was a surprise even to the master of the house; and it was reckoned in excellent taste and very annising. In the time of Charles I, the shipping we are told was about fourteen hundred tons-1than the lonnage of a single modern first-class ship; and the seamen belonging to the port only numbered about two hundred. But a great impetus was given to trade by the construction of the Old Dock, towards which the Corporation gave. Old Dock, towards which the Corporation gave, in that day, the large sum of £500, the town dues for the year being only £360. Since then the Corporation fostered trade, spending money and giving land for that purpose, until we find that up to the year 1857, when the Liverpool and Birkenhead Dock Estates were consolidated, and, together with the town-dues, handed over to the Mersey.
